Cyprus held its first Gay Pride parade in Nicosia on May 31, 2014, organized by Accept-LGBT Cyprus, drawing nearly 5,000 participants, far exceeding expectations and featuring support from former President George Vasiliou and pop star Anna Vissi. Held 16 years after homosexuality's decriminalization, the event marched through central Nicosia streets from the Municipal Gardens, emphasizing equal rights amid a conservative society, with speeches, performances, and family activities. This landmark parade marked a turning point for visibility and acceptance, growing annually with government backing and inspiring events on both sides of the island, including in the north
